

Date

Date or period of event

Format specified as year-month-day or as year-month

0880-11-29
0880-11-29

Iraq - Southern Part
Iraq - Southern Part

temperature intensity:cool
rain

They advanced to a place which Abū Aḥmad chose as quarters for himself, within two miles of the city of Sulaymān b. Jāmi'. Here, facing the troops of the perfidious one (that is, the leader of the Zanj), they stayed during Monday and Tuesday, the twenty-first of Rabi' II (November 29 – 30, 880). Then a heavy downpour began, and an intense cold afflicted his troops during the days of his stay there. Rain and cold prevented him from fighting, and they did not engage in battle until the end of the week.

ID:106888

Location

Position of event

Check latitude and longitude on tambora.org

0880-12

Dujayl

thunderstorm

Then he stood by al-Jubbā'ī's grave until he was buried. Following this, he addressed his troops with a sermon in which he spoke of the death of al-Jubbā'ī. This death occurred on a night of thunder and lightning, and the perfidious one was reported to have said: " I knew the time of his soul's ascent before word of his death came to to me, because I heard the chant of the angels praying for him and pleading for mercy for him."

ID:106993

Content information

Code(s) of citation

Type and class of event

0881-01

Iraq - Southern Part

earthquake

Now , when the Dujayl bridge was tied, Abū Ahmad sent his troops across, then he himself followed, and established his camp on the western bank of the river in the place called Qasr al-Ma'mūn. He remained for three days. One night there was a terrible earthquake, May God preserve us from its evil and save us from its adversity!

ID:106994

tambora.org

Hyperlink to more detailed information

